A man's legs, covered in blood, are visible. The man walks slowly toward him—it's Tae-il.

Taeil, carrying the chair, drops it in front of the bathroom door. He sees the man inside and laughs out loud.

INSERT) Tae-il's heartbeat sound. Tae-il breathing, his lips trembling.

Byeongcheol: "Are you okay, Taeil? Do you know how scared I was finding you collapsed on the mountain?" Cheol-tae (hugging Taeil): "Just think of it as a nightmare."

Taeil: I live for you guys. I need a break. (Pointing toward the door with his middle finger) Can you guys leave?

Byeongcheol:

Yeah. Sure.

Cheol-tae: Yeah.

Taeil watches Byeongcheol and Cheoltae's backs, his expression suddenly turning fierce. He stands under the electric heating pad bed, pulls out a photo of a terrifying woman, looks at it and laughs. He gets up from the bed, puts on his shoes, and walks slowly forward.

Byeong-cheol: I don't know either. I can't remember.

Cheol-tae looked around Byeong-cheol's vicinity, then stared suspiciously at the fallen candy.
Cheol-tae and Byeong-cheol turn to look at Tae-il.

Byeongcheol suddenly finds himself unable to look
Cheol-tae straight in the eye.

Cheol-tae, lying is bad.

Do you know what? It's you betraying and hitting me. Understand, Byeongcheol?

Cheol-tae kicks Byeong-cheol's leg, forcing him to kneel.

Cheol-tae (slapping Byeong-cheol's cheek) Do you think I'm someone who lets things slide and forgives you just because we're friends, Byeong-

Cheol-tae hits Byeong-cheol's head and toy gun simultaneously with his left hand, using
